

Language Requirements

IRM students must achieve language skills beyond the level of proficiency. For most languages, proficiency is attained by completing a course at the 2000 level, by which point the basic grammar and structure of the language will have been covered.

The requirement can be fulfilled in one of two ways:

- Demonstrated proficiency in two foreign languages, or
- Demonstrated facility in one foreign language (proficiency plus one course that uses the language to explore some aspect of a foreign culture, such as literature or film)

All language courses must be taken for a letter grade.

Study Abroad

IRM students are strongly encouraged to study abroad to bring a practical dimension to their expertise in international issues. Those who choose this option will find the requirements for the concentration highly compatible with courses taken abroad.

To learn more about programs available for study abroad, consult the Cornell Abroad Office, 300 Caldwell Hall.

International Relations Minor (IRM)

for undergraduates at Cornell University

Cornell University

About the IR Minor

An interdisciplinary program for undergraduate students enrolled in any of the seven undergraduate colleges.

The IR Minor is not a major or a department, but rather a program offering a selection of courses reaching across colleges and departments. Students follow the Minor in addition to their regular degree.

Provides a structured yet flexible program for undergraduates to take advantage of the vast resources available at Cornell for studying the politics, economics, history, languages, and cultures of the countries and regions of the world.

International course work and language study provide an opportunity to add a global and cross-cultural dimension to those majors. Spending a semester or year of study abroad can contribute to meeting the course requirements of the IR Minor, including the language requirement.

Graduates of the program have gone on to pursue further education in fields such as political science and anthropology, and to successful careers in international law, economics, agriculture, trade, finance, and government service. They are working in international and nongovernmental organizations, in cross-cultural affairs, in journalism, in education, and other fields.

Course Requirements

IRM students take courses throughout the university, which are grouped into four subject areas:

- International Economics and Development
- World Politics and Foreign Policy
- Transnational Processes and Policies
- Cultural Studies

Courses within these four subject areas are designated as “core” or “elective.” Students must complete eight courses selected from the four groups according to one of two options.

All courses used to fulfill the concentration requirements must be taken for a letter grade.

Option A emphasizes the politics and economics of international relations.

- One core course from each group
- One elective from each group

Option B puts greater stress on culture.

- One core course from each groups 1, 2, 3, and 4
- One elective from either group 1 or group 2.
- One elective from each of groups 3 and 4, and one additional elective from either group 3 or group 4.

Core Courses

Group 1: International Economics and Development

ECON 3545 – International Finance and Macroeconomics

ECON 4510 – International Trade Theory and Policy

ILRIC 3547 – America, Business and International Political Economy

Group 2: World Politics and Foreign policy

GOVT 1817: Making Sense of World Politics

Group 3: Transnational Politics and Policies

DSOC 2050 – International Development

DSOC 3311 – Environmental Governance

GOVT 3867 – War: Causes and Conduct

Group 4: Cultural Studies

ANTHR 1400 - The Comparison of Cultures

GOVT 4365 – Ethnonational Communities and Conflicts
