Internationalization Symposium – Co-Organizers

Mario Einaudi Center for International Studies

Since its founding five decades ago, the Einaudi Center has helped to stimulate, support, and coordinate Cornell’s work in and about the world and it is continuing this effort on myriad fronts. Today, the Einaudi Center is the primary forum for interdisciplinary study of international and global affairs at Cornell. It is a main sponsor of research, teaching, and outreach on campus and abroad. It strives to do its part to make Cornell the exemplary global university in an increasingly interconnected world.

Cornell Abroad

"Thinking otherwise" is a Cornell tradition and a consequence of a Cornell education. Cornell Abroad is a university-wide resource dedicated to fostering it through undergraduate education abroad. Cornell Abroad provides an administrative platform for a variety of academic activities abroad and assists faculty in developing initiatives that integrate study abroad with study on Ithaca campus. In partnerships with Cornell departments and peer institutions, Cornell Abroad manages a portfolio of distinctive immersive study abroad programs, supplementing it with select programs of other universities and organizations overseas. Cornell’s programs abroad stimulate direct meaningful engagement with diverse intellectual and cultural perspectives; integrate theoretical inquiry with hands-on projects; and foster innovation, ingenuity, and the collaborative spirit.

Center for Engaged Learning + Research

Engaged Learning + Research is an interdisciplinary, university-wide center committed to service-learning, community-based research and public scholarship. Our work serves students, staff, faculty and community partners locally, nationally and internationally.

Office of Academic Diversity Initiatives (OADI)

OADI is all about inclusion and achievement across the Cornell campus so that students of all backgrounds excel in reaching their academic goals. Our students add tremendously to an educational environment that brings excellence to all fields of study. Without diverse points of view, coming from varied life experience and ways of looking and interpreting the world, all classrooms and research would suffer. We seek to ensure a high quality academic and intellectual experience for all at Cornell.

Center for Teaching Excellence

The Center for Teaching Excellence emphasizes the importance of life-long learning by offering researched-based programs and services that support teaching at Cornell University. We partner with the entire Cornell community to advance instructional practices that focus on student learning. We offer customizable services that foster dialogue on teaching and learning based on individual, departmental, and/or college-level interests.
